The Philadelphia Orchestra
Richard Kaufman Conductor – PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA DEBUT

Mozart

Amadeus (with film)

Some of the most glorious music ever written; plus a mystery full of passion, jealousy, and (possibly) murder; plus a live soundtrack performed by the incomparable Philadelphia Orchestra: it just doesn't get any better than Amadeus, the enthralling story of composer Antonio Salieri's crippling envy of the vastly more talented Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. As the (fictionalized but immensely entertaining) plot plays out onscreen, you'll hear excerpts from Mozart's dazzling symphonies, serenades, and piano concertos, as well as The Marriage of Figaro, Don Giovanni, and the Requiem that he tried desperately to finish as he lay dying.

This 1984 film directed by Miloš Forman was a smash hit, winning eight Academy Awards. The original soundtrack album is one of the most popular classical music records ever. Veteran film conductor Richard Kaufman is on the podium for these unforgettable nights at the movies.

Bernstein	Symphonic Dances from West Side Story

It's a gala opening night for the ages when The Philadelphia Orchestra and its superstar music director, Yannick Nézet-Séguin, launch Carnegie Hall's 2017-18 season with a concert of American classics. Few works are as quintessentially New York as Gershwin's bluesy Rhapsody in Blue and when the soloist is Lang Lang, the sparks fly. The energy, romance, and grit of New York is also portrayed in Bernstein's music for the film On the Waterfront and his Symphonic Dances from West Side Story.

Audience favorite Gil Shaham returns to Verizon Hall with Tchaikovsky's monumental Violin Concerto. The concert opens with the U.S. premiere of a new Violin Concerto, commissioned for the Centre's 10th anniversary and performed by Chinese sensation Ning Feng. Gautier Capuçon joins with a performance of Chen Qigang's haunting Reflections of a Disappearing Time, for cello and orchestra. Brahms's Symphony No. 4 closes the evening with a nod to the cultural exchange between our two orchestras as the Philadelphians perform this work for Chinese audiences in Beijing in May 2017.

That's Wynton Marsalis, master of New Orleans jazz and classical trumpet. The sensational Nicola Benedetti has been raising the roof around the globe with the jazz-inspired Violin Concerto Marsalis wrote for her; this performance—her Philadelphia Orchestra subscription debut—highlights our multi-year exploration of American Sounds. And you may think you know Holst's astrological work of art, The Planets, but it's truly otherworldly experienced live, including an off stage women's chorus. David Kim Violin

Bach
Bruckner

Violin Concerto No. 2
Symphony No. 8

Bruckner, says Yannick, is the only composer he feels as if he had conducted in a previous life. You'll understand why he's sealed his international reputation as a true Brucknerian when he leads the Orchestra in this epic symphony, the last the composer completed. It's "the summit of his art," says Yannick, with a final coda that conjures "all the bells of the world ringing at the same time." A smaller ensemble and the "lovely turns" (New York Times) of concertmaster David Kim open the program with Bach's airy and melodic Violin Concerto No. 2, an intimate contrast to Bruckner's intricate masterpiece.

Haydn

The Seasons

“This is one of his greatest masterpieces,” says Yannick about Haydn’s The Seasons. “He put everything he had into that score.” From the first blush of spring to impending winter, Haydn’s exuberant oratorio, written close to the end of his life, encompasses a full year of living: sunrises and sunsets, a thundering storm, the wonder of nature and all the Earth’s creatures, sonorous calls to the hunt, and boisterous drinking songs. Yannick’s mission to bring great choral repertoire to Verizon Hall continues with gusto with what he calls Haydn’s “most touching work: grand scale and very full of life, joy, and hope.”

ALL AMERICAN: GERSHWIN AND BEYOND

Gershwin	Piano Concerto in F
Dvořák	Suite in A major for Orchestra ("American") - FIRST PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA PERFORMANCES
Barber	Symphony No. 1

This is a program of quintessential American music. Gershwin, the leading American composer of the Jazz Age, drew his inspiration from music halls and vaudeville. This is no more apparent than in his charming, jazzy Promenade and the rip-roaring Piano Concerto in F, performed with brio by our returning soloist and Gershwin specialist Jon Kimura Parker. Dvořák, on his visit to America in the 1890s, drew inspiration from folk songs and spirituals and incorporated original themes based on these melodies into his works. On the podium is James Gaffigan, one of the most important young American conductors today. Philadelphian Samuel Barber went on to become one of the most prominent musical figures in developing a new American romantic style.

This program highlights his mastery, from the fairy-tale charms of Hansel and Gretel to the powerful mythological romance of Tannhäuser. A renowned symphonic conductor as well, Maestro Runnicles will reveal all the charm and profundity of Mozart's "Prague" Symphony. We open with Vaughan Williams's 16th-century retrospective Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, featuring the uniquely lush Philadelphia strings.

Adès	Suite from Powder Her Face - PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA CO-COMMISSION—U.S. PREMIERE
Bernstein	Serenade (after Plato's Symposium) for Solo Violin, Strings, Harp, and Percussion
Sibelius	Symphony No. 1

Our tribute to Leonard Bernstein continues with his Serenade—a musical retelling of Plato's ode to love—written for his friend Isaac Stern and recorded to great critical acclaim by our 2017-18 artist-in-residence, Hilary Hahn, when she was 18, five years after she made her Philadelphia Orchestra debut. Opera Philadelphia received raves when it staged the local premiere of Thomas Adès's lascivious Powder Her Face in 2013. In this Philadelphia Orchestra co-commission, Yannick leads the first U.S. performances of a suite of music from the ripped-from-the-tabloids opera. Finally, a melancholy clarinet solo heralds the opening of Sibelius's First Symphony, giving way to an explosion of sound evoking a sparkling Scandinavian panorama.

Flute Concerto - PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA COMMISSION—WORLD PREMIERE

Brahms

Symphony No. 2

We continue our tradition of creating new works for our stellar principal players with the world premiere of Samuel Jones's Flute Concerto, written for Jeffrey Khaner. Jones's lyrical style is a perfect fit for Khaner's pure tone and brilliant technique. The Overture to Rosamunde is "a small Schubertian gem" (New York Times). Brahms's Second Symphony poured from the composer's pen in just one summer; its sunny, pastoral nature nevertheless bears all the hallmarks of his genius. Pablo Heras-Casado returns to Verizon Hall following his stunning 2016 debut with the Orchestra.

An extraordinary opportunity to hear our music director not only as conductor, but also as chamber musician. Yannick will be at the keyboard for Elgar's haunting Piano Quintet. "I'm an advocate and champion of that piece," he says. A "best of" treasury of Handel's sunny Water Music, written for an outdoor concert on the Thames, opens the second half of the program. Storm clouds gather over the North Sea as we conclude with Britten's Four Sea Interludes from the most famous of English operas, set in the Suffolk fishing village that was also the composer's home.

Hear! Hear the pipes are calling! These are the first Philadelphia Orchestra performances of Peter Maxwell Davies's sprightly composition, inspired by the high-spirited Orkney Islands wedding of friends and featuring, yes, a bagpipe solo. First Associate Concertmaster Juliette Kang is the violin soloist for Bruch's fantasia of traditional folk songs from the Highlands and beyond. Mendelssohn took a walking tour of Scotland as a young man and returned home with the first strains of his "Scottish" Symphony—one of his most cherished works.

Prelude and "Liebestod," from Tristan and Isolde

An Irish princess falls in love with the wrong man on her way to be married in Cornwall. The story, steeped in Celtic mythology, is tragic, but Wagner's score is gorgeous, especially in the hands of Zurich Opera Music Director and frequent collaborator Fabio Luisi. Haydn's grand "London" Symphony opens our British Isles farewell. When Haydn left Vienna for England, he left behind a promising young pupil, 23-year-old Ludwig van Beethoven, who soon went on to write a few memorable works of his own, including the timeless Piano Concerto No. 3, heard here with legendary soloist Yefim Bronfman.

Weber	Overture to Der Freischütz
Schumann	Cello Concerto
Beethoven	Symphony No. 5

“There is no question that his whole heart is in what he’s doing,” says the Washington Post of Christoph Eschenbach, and that heart will be on full display when our former music director returns to lead the Philadelphians. Cello virtuoso Alisa Weilerstein (“truly a phenomenon”—The Telegraph) brings her incredible musicality to bear on Schumann’s Cello Concerto. Never performed during the composer’s lifetime, this intensely personal work now lives in the pantheon of cello compositions. From its indelible four-note opening to the rousing finale, Beethoven’s Fifth Symphony never fails to enthrall. Der Freischütz (The Freeshooter) was a triumph for Carl Maria von Weber; the Overture alone makes clear why the work inspired composers from Wagner to Berlioz.

Mahler

Symphony No. 4

Mirga Gražinytė-Tyla has taken the symphonic world by storm; she was just 29 years old when she became music director of the City of Birmingham Symphony in 2016. (The Guardian: Her “combination of precision, poise and power is remarkable.”) Hear what all the well-deserved excitement is about as she makes her Philadelphia Orchestra debut. Pianist Menahem Pressler also made an important debut here in Philadelphia: After fleeing Nazi Germany with his family, he gave his first American performances with Eugene Ormandy in 1947 at the age of 23. In the 70 years since, he’s toured the world as a leading soloist and founder of the revered Beaux Arts Trio. Mahler’s Fourth Symphony is based on one of his own songs, an ethereal depiction of a child’s vision of paradise. Heavenly!

Beethoven	Leonore Overture No. 3
Wieniawski	Violin Concerto No. 2
Dvořák	Symphony No. 8

Joshua Bell first captivated Philadelphia audiences and then the world with his astonishing prowess, on full display in this series of concerts centered on St. Petersburg, Russia. Bell performs Wieniawski's romantic and Paganini-like Violin Concerto No. 2, premiered while the composer and violinist was living and teaching in St. Petersburg. The Concerto exhibits a glossy nostalgia in stark contrast to Shostakovich's emotionally charged work dedicated to the same great Russian city. The "Leningrad" Symphony is a vivid depiction of invading armies and the devastating impact of war. Yannick leads the Orchestra for three performances of Shostakovich's towering masterpiece. Cristian Măcelaru guest conducts for a special fourth performance, pairing Bell and Wieniawski with Dvořák's euphoric Symphony No. 8 and Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3.

Brahms	Selected Hungarian Dances

Once more, one of America's most acclaimed and most frequently performed living composers, Philadelphian Jennifer Higdon, graces us with a brilliant new work, this time for those stalwarts of the brass section, the trombones and tuba. Hear them shine in this rare turn in the spotlight. Beethoven's Eighth Symphony may seem overshadowed by the magnificent Ninth that followed, but there's compositional genius (and humor) to burn here. Zoltán Kodály's Dances of Marosszék are the rural counterpart of Brahms's more urbane Hungarian Dances; they make wonderful bookends for this strikingly original program.

Measha Brueggergosman Soprano – PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA SUBSCRIPTION DEBUT

Tilson Thomas	Four Preludes on Playthings of the Wind - FIRST PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA PERFORMANCES
Tchaikovsky	Symphony No. 6 ("Pathétique")

Michael Tilson Thomas conducts his own thought-provoking meditation on civilizations and destiny. This work is presented in a uniquely theatrical style with a jazz band, lead singer, and two back-up vocalists. Soprano Measha Brueggergosman, who sang the world premiere, is our soloist. Inspired by American poet Carl Sandburg's text, his words are as relevant today as when they were written almost 100 years ago. Tchaikovsky's "Pathétique" Symphony shares a similar contrast of hope and devastation that is both thrilling and deeply introspective.

van der Aa	Violin Concerto - U.S. PREMIERE
Rachmaninoff	Symphony No. 2

Dutch composer Michel van der Aa hails the sensational violinist Janine Jansen as the inspiration for his Violin Concerto, as much for her expressive personality as her chosen instrument: "If Janine had played the flute, I would have written a Flute Concerto." Be among the first to hear this highly creative new work. Yannick honors The Philadelphia Orchestra's deep Rachmaninoff tradition with his Second Symphony, popular with audiences and composer alike; its rave reception boosted Rachmaninoff's faith in his musical abilities.

Bernstein	Symphony No. 2 for Piano and Orchestra ("The Age of Anxiety")
Schumann	Symphony No. 4
Strauss	Don Juan

The poet W.H. Auden captured the mood of an uneasy generation with his post-war The Age of Anxiety, a work that inspired Bernstein's Second Symphony, a musical dialogue among four strangers searching for happiness in an unsettled world. At least one of them finds "the core of faith," said Bernstein, "which is what one is after—and what I'm after in every work I ever write." Bernstein himself was at the piano for the premiere; our soloist is the daring and dashing Jean-Yves Thibaudet, "a musician with fearless, flawless fingers" (The West Australian). Yannick compares the tortured genius of Bernstein with that of Schumann with the latter's flowing Symphony No. 4, ending with the passionate frenzy of Richard Strauss's Don Juan.

Bernstein	Chichester Psalms
Machover	Philadelphia Voices - PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA COMMISSION—WORLD PREMIERE
Musorgsky	Pictures from an Exhibition

MIT professor and inventor of new technology for music Tod Machover has been called "America's most wired composer." In this crowd-sourced Philadelphia Orchestra commission, he creates a piece infused with sounds and voices contributed by today's Philadelphians. Inspired by the hundreds of thousands who sang in unison on the Parkway during the visit of Pope Francis in 2015, and reflecting the Orchestra's deep relationship with, and commitment to, its city and community, this work will represent Philadelphia Voices in the truest sense. The Chichester Psalms, setting psalms in their original Hebrew, is one of Bernstein's most overtly religious works and an exquisite choral plea for peace. We conclude with Musorgsky's Pictures from an Exhibition in Ravel's orchestration, a glorious showcase of the Philadelphia Sound.

Maestro Denève offers another Philadelphia premiere from Guillaume Connesson, his Flammenschrift (Flaming Letters), a tribute to German music. Equally worthy of tribute: Richard Strauss's spiritual Death and Transfiguration and Ravel's whirling La Valse, described by the composer as "dancing on the edge of a volcano."

This engaging concert evokes Italy and Egypt (with a French accent). Berlioz presents all the color and excitement of a Roman carnival. Saint-Saëns composed his Fifth Piano Concerto in Luxor (hence the name); Nicholas Angelich serves up its exotic musical flavor with panache. Guillaume Connesson based his new work on a line from the Italian poet Giacomo Leopardi's The Calm after the Storm, while the Italian Respighi paints a landscape portrait as enduring as the Eternal City itself. Stéphane Denève leads our tour-de-force tour.

Period ensemble expert Nicholas McGegan returns for an intimate performance of Italian-style Baroque and neo-classical music. Plus the Fred J. Cooper Memorial Organ is featured in one of the many great Handel concertos for the instrument with the skillful Peter Richard Conte at the keys. The Italian Baroque concerto grosso tradition inspired Respighi and Stravinsky to write historically inspired works that bookend this program. And no program of Italian music would be complete without the definitive national voice of Rossini, telling the Cinderella tale in his Overture to La Cenerentola. Two performances only!

Hélène Grimaud and Yannick Nézet-Séguin have performed together all over the world, becoming great musical friends. Their warmth and deep artistic connection will be on display as they bring this season to an electrifying conclusion with monumental works by Beethoven, Brahms, and Schumann. Grimaud (“astounding technique and daring musical insight”—San Diego Story) stars in landmark piano concertos (Beethoven’s Fourth, Brahms’s First) that have defined the piano repertory; her unique interpretations will have you listening to these favorite works with renewed joy. Schumann revised his Fourth Symphony late in his troubled life; his personal struggles did not prevent him from creating a masterpiece that has only grown in stature over time. And we end this season’s musical journey with Beethoven’s Seventh Symphony. The composer was on the podium for the 1813 premiere in Vienna; according to one participant, Beethoven “tore his arms asunder and jumped in the air.” Yannick will keep his musical passions focused on leading the Fabulous Philadelphians; you will want to bring your hands together (and perhaps jump into the air.)
